ABSTRACT

A description of Sam Houston University and the College of Criminal Justice introduces this annotated bibliography, which provides a single comprehensive listing of the master's degree theses written by students in the criminal justice program from its establishment in 1965 through 1990. Several 1991 theses are included although their call numbers were not yet available. The theses are listed in alphabetical order by author, and a subject index with standardized subject headings based on the Library of Congress subject headings is provided to facilitate access to individual theses by professors and students in the master's degree program. The entry for each of the 749 theses includes the author's name, the title, date of thesis, research methodology, a brief abstract, the Library of Congress call number, and subject headings. Most of the theses indexed here focus on topics relating to criminal, correctional, judicial, administrative, educational, psychological, sociological, or legal issues and policies in the United States, particularly the state of Texas. An explanation of the way the theses are indexed precedes the subject index. (BBM)

AUTHOR ABSTRACT

The authors provide a comprehensive, annotated bibliography of the master's theses written by students of the College of Criminal Justice, Sam Houston State University in Huntsville, Texas. Theses from the establishment of the program at Sam Houston State University in 1965 through 1990 are listed in alphabetical order by author. Abstracts are brief, two or three sentence statements. A subject index, based largely on Library of Congress subject headings, is included as well.

The authors state why the bibliography was needed and how it was created using the Pro-Cite software produced by Personal Bibliographic Software, Inc. The bibliographic entries were copied into Word Perfect for ease of editing and printing. The authors also provide information about Sam Houston State University and College of Criminal Justice.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

We should like to thank several faculty or staff members of Sam Houston State University for their help in this project. Our gratitude is extended to (1) Professor Charles Friel (then Dean) and Debra McCall, Assistant Graduate Coordinator, College of Criminal Justice, for their cooperation and assistance in verifying student records of theses; (2) Newton Gresham Library librarians Ann Holder and Nancy Bounds for their reference and bibliographic assistance and (3) Dan Konopnicki, Systems specialist, Newton Greshan Library for his generous help with Pro-Cite and Word Perfect software. With all of their assistance, completion of this reference source was far easier.

INTRODUCTION

The purpose of this annotated bibliography is to provide a single annotated bibliography, with a subject index, of master's degree theses written by students of the College of Criminal Justice, Sam Houston State University from its establishment in 1965 through 1990. Several 1991 theses are included although their call numbers were not yet available.

The authors saw the need for a comprehensive annotated bibliography of criminal justice theses for several reasons. Professors and students in the master's degree program often needed to review theses for content, format or ideas. Those who wanted to locate citations of theses by topic as well as abstracts, however, needed to use both the library's online catalog and the numerous volumes of the Abstracts of Theses in the library's reference collection. This multi-volume reference set reproduces all University students' own abstracts of theses about every other year. The abstracts in each volume are arranged alphabetically by surname under the degree program (Sociology, Biology, Criminal Justice, etc.) A subject index is not provided. Title or topical access to the theses abstracts in each volume, therefore, is provided only through the online or card catalog. A roadblock is encountered in searching the card catalog, however, because it was closed in 1985 although it is still accessible to library patrons. Moreover, access to either catalog is sometimes difficult because subject headings and cataloging practices have varied with different catalogers since 1965.

The authors created this annotated bibliography of criminal justice theses in order to increase access points and standardize subject headings by creating one subject index for all of the criminal justice theses written between 1965 and 1990. The authors developed this annotated bibliography by (1) obtaining a list of all graduates of the Master of Arts program from the College's graduate office, (2) comparing the list of graduates to the Abstract of Theses, (3) entering the key bibliographic information into the Pro-Cite program, (4) writing and inputting a brief abstract for each thesis and (5) trying to rectify missing volumes or entries as a result of a thorough inventory. The Pro-Cite software was used to input the bibliographic information and abstracts, as well as to create the subject index for this work. The Pro-Cite data file was then copied to a word processing package (Word Perfect) for editing.

Pro-Cite allowed the authors to create a workform for entering the bibliographic information in the following order:

author,
title,
date of thesis,
research methodology,
abstract,
Library of Congress call number, and subject heading(s).

The methodologies used in each thesis were coded and displayed in the Pro-Cite "note" line. The codes are as follows:

LR - Literature review
Q - Questionnaire
PE - Personal experience
DC - Data collection
I - Interviews,
SA - Statistical analysis, and
C - Case Study

Bibliographic information, abstracts and codes were based on the information supplied by the authors in their own abstracts. Subject headings, however, were based on the Library of Congress subject headings assigned by catalogers at Sam Houston State University.

INSTITUTIONAL BACKGROUND

Sam Houston State University was created by the Texas Legislature in 1879 to train teachers for Texas public schools. Called Sam Houston Normal Institute until 1923 when it became Sam Houston State Teachers College, the institution grew quickly and offered instruction in agriculture, home economics, the natural sciences, sociology, geography, and foreign languages. The first Baccalaureate degree was awarded in 1919. In 1925, the college was admitted to and accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools. Programs and the curriculum expanded once a graduate degree was authorized in 1936.

By the 1960's, 25 percent of the graduating seniors were receiving degrees in business administration; social and communication sciences; the biological, physical and soil sciences; the fine arts and humanities, as well as education. Because of this growth, the institution's name was changed to Sam Houston State College in 1965. This is the same year that The Institute of Contemporary Corrections and the Behavioral Sciences was created as part of the institution.

The mission of the Criminal Justice program at Sam Houston State University was set in 1963 by the Texas State Legislature (House Resolution 469). It directed the University, specifically, to: (1) develop undergraduate and graduate degree programs in criminal justice; (2) develop continuing education programs for criminal justice professionals; (3) conduct research on the problems of crime and the administration of justice; and (4) provide technical assistance to the state's criminal justice community.

Within a few years of its inception in 1965, undergraduate degrees, graduate degrees, and extension programs were offered. The latter provided criminal justice educational opportunities for professionals in the metropolitan areas of the state for the first time in the state's history. Pleased with the early success of the program, the Legislature enacted House Concurrent Resolution 11 in 1967 which applauded the early successes of the program and pledged future financial support to enable the program to become one of national eminence. In 1969, the Texas Legislature again recognized the significant changes and growth that occurred and changed the name of the institution to Sam Houston State University. During the 1970's, the university continued its dynamic growth by offering undergraduate degree programs in computer science, environmental science, and graduate programs. The latter include the Master of Library Science, Master of Fine Arts, and Ph.D in Criminal Justice.

The Criminal Justice program since has evolved into the largest criminal justice education and training program in the English-speaking world; a result not only of the skill and dedication of its faculty and staff, but also the unprecedented support received from the legislature of the state of Texas, the criminal justice community, private philanthropy and grants from the federal government.

The University's Criminal Justice Center houses the College of Criminal Justice and the Institute of Criminal Justice. The College offers both baccalaureate and masters degrees in criminal justice and is one of a few institutions in the United States which offers the Ph.D. in criminal justice, cited by the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board as one of the best programs in the nation. The eclectic faculty of 24 includes criminologists, psychologists, sociologists, lawyers, and men and women with degrees in education, criminal justice, and social work, some of whom are internationally ranked scholars in their respective areas of expertise. The College boasts 7,000 alumni, many of whom have assumed positions of leadership in the criminal justice community nationally. Currently, the College has over 1,400 undergraduate and graduate majors from throughout the nation.

The Institute administers an extensive continuing education and training program to meet the needs of the criminal justice community. The Institute includes a Police Academy, the state's first Probation Training Academy, a Correctional Training Academy, and is the site of the College for New Judges as well as the certification program of the Texas Association for Court Administration. In a typical year, the Institute provides over 300 continuing education and training programs for more than 14,000 criminal justice professionals.

In its brief history, a number of innovative educational and research programs, and notable successes have been achieved, including the following:

< 1965 - conducted the first Inter-agency Workshop bringing to campus for the first time in Texas professionals from law enforcement, courts and corrections to discuss the state's criminal justice problems;

< 1966 - cited by the Southern Regional Education Board as the best model of a university-agency program in correctional rehabilitation;

< 1968 - developed a specialized masters degree program for the education of military officers responsible for administering military correctional facilities;

< 1970 - established the first Master of Arts degree program in criminal justice in Texas and the Correctional Archives which includes the libraries and papers of some of the nation's leading penologists (Sanford Bates, Vladimir Eliasberg, Donald Clemmer, Frank Loveland, Austin MacCormick and James Bennett;)

< 1971 - established one of the first Ph.D. programs in criminal justice in the United States; in cooperation with the Texas Department of Corrections, and the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration of the U.S. Department of Justice, began construction of the Criminal Justice Center, the largest single facility in the nation dedicated to criminal justice education, training and research;

< 1972 - established the state's first Probation Training Academy;

< 1973 - creation of the Jesse H. and Mary Gibbs Jones Doctoral Fellowship Program by the Houston Endowment Inc., which has become the most generously funded doctoral scholarship program in criminal justice in the nation;

< 1977 - designation of the Hazel B. Kerper Courtroom in the Criminal Justice Center as a district courtroom which is used regularly by federal judges, U.S. magistrates and Texas criminal district and county court of law judges for the trial of criminal cases, a program of unprecedented value for students;

< 1980 - established a statewide Police Academy certified by the Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Officer Standards and Education, the first criminal justice education program in the nation to be certified by the Criminal Justice Education Council; creation of the Steve Moore Scholarship Program; creation of the Beto Chair Professorship by the Houston Endowment Inc., one of only two endowed chairs in criminal justice in the English-speaking world;

< 1982 - creation of the innovative Master of Science degree in Criminal Justice Administration, an intensive semester program taught on weekends providing criminal justice executives the opportunity to pursue graduate education in justice administration;

< 1983 - the Criminal Justice Center was selected by the United Nations as the site for its international conference on developing uniform standards for international crime statistics;

< 1990 - establishment of the Cooperative Education Program with the Correction Bureau of the Japanese Ministry of Justice; publication of the Texas Jail Almanac and Texas Jails, Law and Practice;

< 1991-publication of the Court Exemplar, a newsletter for judges and court administrators in concert with the Texas Association of Court Administrators; publication of Supervision and Treatment of Sex Offenders, Texas Juvenile Law and Practice, Alcohol and Drug Awareness and Prevention in Texas, Alcohol and Drug Prevention Strategies for Law Enforcement; the naming of Dr. Timothy J. Flanagan; the re-dedication of the Center as the George J. Beto Criminal Justice Center.

SUBJECT INDEX

Subject Index

This subject index captures the key subject headings for each thesis based largely on the Library of Congress subject headings assigned by catalogers at Sam Houston State University. These headings were modified for the sake of consistency or style. Users should be aware of the following distinctions:

1. Most theses indexed here focus on topics relating to criminal, correctional, judicial, administrative, educational, psychological, sociological or legal issues and policies in the United States, particularly the state of Texas.

2. When a thesis covers a broad subject such as "Crime and Criminals," it is indexed under the general heading rather than all of the additional sub-headings unless there is particular emphasis on that subtopic. On the other hand, theses whose focus is a narrow subtopic, such as "Crime and Criminals - Statistics," are NOT normally indexed also under the broader concept "Crime and Criminals." The reader interested in looking at all theses about Crime and Criminals, therefore, must examine all entries under the root subject heading.

3. Theses whose focus is a specific geographical country, region, state or city are indexed by that geographical subheading under the main topic. Examples: "Drunkenness--Texas;" "Gambling--Bahamas;" " Arrest - Dallas County, Texas." Unless so designated, the reader may assume that the thesis focuss on the Unites States in general.

4. Word Perfect word-processing software was used to modify the index created by the Pro-Cite software. The reader may notice that headings appearing in the bibliography have been modified in the Subject Index for stylistic reasons.
